LATISHA'S STORY

When we first met Latisha, she was standing on a street corner, hot and hungry, her trafficker not far away. She told us she was 25, but we thought she was a child because she looked so young. We gave her a sandwich and something to drink, and she told us no one cared if she lived or died.

We connected Latisha with the Chicago Dream Center. She jumped at the opportunity for a new life and a safe place to call home. Watching this opportunity drastically change her life inspired us to open Latisha's House. Latisha's House is a safe place where women heal from trauma, realize broken dreams, and discover opportunities to become whoever they want to be.
